DOMAIN PRIVACY PROTECTION

Have you ever just registered a domain name only to start receiving unsolicited e-mails, regular mail or even phone calls days later? There are tens of thousands of people who make your information their business. Spammers or criminals "harvest" your contact information via the public whois and use this very same information to either spam you or do even worse things. Serious crimes such as identity theft are at levels never seen before, why leave yourself exposed? Ican regulations require accurate and verifiable whois information for your domain at all times. What these means is you are required to use your real information when you register a domain name.

How does it work?

- We replace your registrant, technical, admin and billing information with our own.
- Although the whois information shows our information, you retain ownership of the domain.
- You can disable/enable your ProtectFly service on a domain at any time
- You have complete control over the domain, you can manage nearly all facets of the domain (DNS, advanced settings etc) via your account
- You can renew and transfer the name at any time(transfers require you restore your registrant info)
- We generate four unique e-mail address for you that appears on all contacts within the Whois Output
- We "scrub" and filter all e-mails sent to this unique e-mail address
- After it "passes" the scrub we forward the message to the e-mail address you specify.
- Only e-mails that pass the scrub are sent to you
- Your real information is NEVER visible, ours is shown instead!
- Enabling ProtectFly is a snap. You can enable ProtectFly on one or a thousand names at once.
